A FINAL COUNTY PROPERTY

Bonded for $17,000, on Report of Leslie Gillett, M. E.

Leslie Gillett of Kelvin is in the city and expects to leave this evening for Tombstone, where he has been called to serve on the United States grand jury. He came to Phoenix a day earlier than usual that he might meet the representatives of eastern capitalists who were recently induced through his efforts to buy a promising mining property in the Mineral hill district, nine miles north of Kelvin.

Mr. Gillett, who is one of Arizona's youngest mining engineers, is located in Kelvin, which is just now attracting considerable attention as the commercial center of a rich mining section.
He made a report on the Mayflower group of claims, which was of such a satisfying nature that it was bonded for $17,000, one thousand of which was advanced as a first payment.

The property is on the right bank of Mineral creek, and technically but little more than a prospect, though it appears to be a fine one. The assessment work has been done for three years, and the ore removed in this work has been shipped, giving good returns in copper, gold and silver.

There are four claims in the group.
The new owners expect to begin development within sixty days, and have every reason to believe that it will make a valuable mine.

The ladies of the Baptist church will hold a sale of useful and fancy articles in their church next Friday in connection with their New England dinners.

all this evening. His business is to hire all the good teams he can get for work on the Arlington canal, the bottom of which is to be widened with ten feet. He is also getting scrapers and other excavating paraphernalia and a supply of provisions for camp purposes. He says the canal company has an ample water supply, but its ditch is a little too narrow to carry all the water that is needed since an increased acreage was brought under cultivation there-about, and it is proposed to correct that situation at once. Five or six thousand dollars will probably be spent in making the improvements.

Mr. Lewis says the farmers in the Arlington country are prosperous and very well contented with their lot, as much so at least as it is given human beings anywhere to be contented. The Arlington Cattle company, of whose operations he is in personal charge, is well satisfied with its enterprises so far and more enthusiastic than ever over future prospects. Its operations began on April 2 of last year, and though the company has spent a great deal more money than it has taken in, it has valuable assets to show for it, and its day for profit taking has not yet arrived. It has done all it expected to, and more, for a first season and a late start. The company has 200 head of fine cattle that have not yet been marketed and 220 acres of good alfalfa pasture. In addition it has put up a lot of hay.

In proportion to the size of their investments, other ranchers have done equally as well. One man who allowed his alfalfa to mature and seed got 500 pounds of seed to the acre, which, at prevailing prices, was a pretty good return, to say nothing of the hay and pasture he got besides.
C. W. Peterson, who went to Arlington from Mesa four years ago, paid $5,000 for his ranch, has improved it and had a good living all the time, and if he cared to do so he could now sell it for $15,000.
